

Irrationality: the Good and the Bad

Dan Ariely (Duke University)

In this lecture I will discuss how the principles of behavioral economics can help us understand some of the irrationalities that influence everyday behavior, including the choices that we make when it comes to making decisions, how we react to pricing, the effects that expectations have on our decisions, and the factors that cause us to behave dishonestly.